1.INTRODUCTION :-

Sawai Madhopur was built as a planned city by Maharaja Sawai Madho Singh I of Jaipur on 19 January 1763, who named the township after himself. On 19 January, Sawai Madhopur celebrates its foundation day. Sawai Madhopur is the Land of Tiger of Rajasthan, is situated between Latitude: 26.037777 and Longitude: 76.352151. Sawai Madhopur District has an area of 4498 km². It is bounded by Dausa District on the north, Karauli District on the northeast, Jaipur District on the northwest, the Chambal River on east across the border of Madhya Pradesh state, Kota District on the southeast, Bundi District on the south, and Tonk District on the west. The city has witnessed several changes of ruling dynasties and kings. It was initially under the control of the Rajput Emperor of Chauhan dynasty, Raja Hammir Dev. Later the city was invaded and taken over by the forces of Alauddin Khilji, and the whole infrastructure was ruined. Currently, Sawai Madhopur is known for several historic and natural sites in and around the city, the prominent ones being the nearby Ranthambore National Park and the Ranthambore Fort, around 11 km from the main city. The city is home to a number of tourist attractions of historical, archaeological and religious importance and also a few sightseeing spots like Ranthambore National Park, Sawai Man Singh Sanctuary and Rameshwaram Ghat. The major historical sites in and around the city are the Ranthambore Fort, the Handar Fort and Sameton ki Haveli. Sawai Madhopur is full of temples and shrines of religious significance, the major ones being Amareshwar Mahadeo Temple, Chamatkarji Jain Temple, Kaila Devi Temple, Chauth Mata Temple and the famous Shri Mahaveerji Temple. These attractions transport visitors to the glorious years of Indian history and show them the rich culture of Rajasthan.
